John's first jobs were with Weyerhaeuser and then the Oregon Department of Forestry in Astoria. He later taught Forestry at Clatsop Community College. Both John and Peg were 4-H leaders in forestry and gardening, respectively; they encouraged young people to understand, enjoy and respect plant life, and, in turn, themselves. The environment was important to them and, although both New England natives, they set out to learn as much as they could about the local flora, fauna, and water systems. Their saying was: Peg could identify all the plants from the waist down and John could name those from the waist up. As youngsters their children were taught to identify plants, trees, birds and animal tracks. After dinner canoe trips up and down the Youngs River were routine. Following the purchase of the Big Walluski Tree Farm, John practiced environmentally-friendly forest management and Peg learned to forage edible mushrooms. It was managed to be an environment hospitable to all forms of life while still being an active tree farm. Herbert & Lorene Rodgers Memorial Scholarship

Herbert Rodgers had plans to go to college after graduating in 1943 from Jewell High School as Valedictorian of his class; however, WWII got in his way. He served in the Pacific from December of 1943 to May of 1946 as a nose gunner on a B24 aircraft. For his service he received a meritorious achievement award. The experiences that he shared with his crew created a life-long bond. He started classes in 1946 at Pacific University in Forest Grove, OR, where he completed two years, at which time he decided to partner with his father in his logging company. He never returned to the classroom. When his father retired, Herbert remained in the business which he shared with his own son, subsequently retiring in 1987. Herbert married Lorene Larson of Birkenfield in 1950. They made their home in Jewell and lived there their entire lives. They had four children - Diane Tiedeman, Donna Holmes, Lynne Barendse and Douglas Rodgers. While Lorene was involved in the Jewell Community Club and church activities, she worked tirelessly on the home front which allowed Herbert to serve on the Jewell School Board and later the Clatsop County ESD Board for many years. He was also a Nehalem Valley Community Church Board member and served as Deacon from 1976 to 1994. Herbert and Lorene celebrated 58 years of marriage when Herbert passed away in 2008 at the age of 83. Both were still influential in the community and continued to be a support to their children and grandchildren. Lorene continued her involvement in the church for many years after, following him in death in 2021 at age 93. It is in their memory that this scholarship is given to graduates of Jewell High School.
